MCI launches its Direct Recruiter application

MCI Consultants today announced the launch of its Direct Recruiter application, a simple, easy to use, web-based, hosted e-recruitment tool that enables any organisation, whether it be a small recruitment firm or large corporate organisation, to post a single vacancy to multiple job boards, social networks, company career web pages and recruitment vendors at the click of a button.

The system, not only posts jobs to these areas but also allows for the automatic screening and rejection of applicants when they apply for vacancies, ensuring only the most suitable candidates get the attention of a recruiter. The rejection of unsuitable candidates is automated. The system also has built in reporting and analytics which enables organisations to track and monitor the performance of a vacancy and helps ascertain which sources bring through the best results more accurately than ever.

"The benefits of this system are huge for an organisation," commented Rhett Davies, a Partner at MCI Consultants, "and mainly come from the automation of the tedious and time consuming administrative tasks associated with recruitment."

"The immediate consequence of this is that recruiters will now have more time to focus on other more important and productive tasks," continued Davies. "This along with the system allowing recruiters to effectively exploit social media and online sources for recruitment purposes coupled with insightful reporting, means that recruiters have more power over their recruitment processes enabling them to source candidates much faster for less."
